

FEEDING FODDER.

An Improved Plan That May Be Adopted With Small Expense.

Throwing the bundles upon the ground for the cattle to trample under foot while the feeder is descending the steps or coming around the back way is the ordinary method of feeding fodder from the two story or the "bank" barn. Those who have been pursuing this plan will greatly appreciate the improvement represented in the following cut, which was originally drawn for The Rural New Yorker and thus described in that jour-

The cost of this arrangement is comparatively small and within the reach of all. A platform 12 to 14 feet long and as wide as the small double door feet or more-is hung to the rear of the barn. Out upon this the fodde is carried and dropped into a feeding rack placed on the ground just below. The side beams of this hanging platform are made of light wood, pine or poplar, 3 inches by 8 inches, connected below by four crosspieces of stouter material, 3 inches by 4 inches, all firmly bolted to gether. Boards nailed down upon these crosspieces form the floor. A bolt having a hook above is inserted near the outer end of each side beam of the platform, and in each doorpost about four feet from the floor, a similar hooked bolt is placed, upon which are hung the brace rods, made of five-eighths inch round iron furnished with a ring at each

Through the sill, just back of each door post, two half inch holes are bored and an iron loop (C) inserted, having an inside measure slightly greater than 3 inches in width and extending half a foot or more below the surface. These receive and hold the beams at the back end of the platform. To prevent straining these loops by any horizontal thrust a board (B) is placed just behind them, against which the ends of the beams may rest. This board is supported by others (AA) nailed against the sleepers in the position shown in the drawing. en the season's feeding is done, the platform is taken down and stowed away until again needed. The feed rack is placed just below the outer end of the platform and parallel with the barn. In this position it may be 16 feet long and yet easily reached from the platform. Ordinary fencing boards and scantling are used in its construction.

Carbon Bisulphide For Hen Lice.

A new use for the bisulphide of carbon has been pointed out by Dr. Schneider in the Journal de l'Agriculture. Dr. Schneider recommends tying a few small bottles of bisulphide of carbon to the perches in the henhouse, the bottles being unstoppered and the liquid allowed to evaporate. The hens roost over the bottles, and the vapor of the bisulphide kills the lice. The recommendation is founded upon careful experiment, as the following extract will show:

"The very next day after using it I was agreeably surprised to find that the enemy had left, leaving none but dead and dying behind, and on the following day not a single living insect was to be day not a single living insect was to be found, while my birds were sitting quietly on the roosts enjoying an un-wontedly peaceful repose. This lasted for 12 days, till the sulphide had evaporated. Twenty-four hours later a fresh invasion of lice had put in an appearance under the wings of the birds in the warmest portions of the house, where there were no currents of air. I replenished the supply of sulphide and the next morning only a few of these were remaining.
"The next morning every trace of ver-

Since that time I have personally made a great number of further trials with the sulphide with immediate and absolute success. I should recommend the sulphide of carbon to be put in small medicine vials hung about the pigeon house or poultry roost. it has about three parts evaporated, the remainder will have acquired a yellow ish tinge and no longer acts so complete-ly as before, but if it be shaken up afresh it will suffice to keep the enemy at a

Keeping Onions In a Cold Climate

A Wisconsin correspondent of Ohio Farmer describes a plan of wintering onions which he considers perfect. He

. We select a piece of dry ground and dig a trench from four to six feet wide and long enough to hold all that we have to put in it. We put them about six inches deep in the pit. They are put upon the ground, but about two inches of straw over them and then a few inches of earth on the straw. We wish them to get frozen as soon as possible after they are put in the pit. After we are certain that they are all forozen we hau some manure and cover them, perhans a foot deeper than at first. There are two reasons for this. One is that if they are allowed to thaw during the winter they will rot and the entire lot be lost Upon the other hand, if they get frozen tco hard, they will either rot when they thaw out or else be dead and worthless for sets.

In the spring, after the frost is all out of them, we take them out of the pit and put them back upon the shelves again as they were during the fall before. There they remain until they are needed to set I have tried various plans of pre serving onion sets through the winter, but none of them has proved as satisactory as the above. In fact, we con-dder it just about perfect,

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

New York Stock Market. NEW YORK, Oct. 9 .- Animated by the telie that the Senate will dispose of the silver repeal bill this week operators started in at an early hour to ac sumulate moderate lines of stocks. The excellent bank statement, the steady cancellation of clearing house certificates and the reduction in sterling exchange also contributed to the good feeling which prevailed in the urgent feeling which prevailed in the urgent early part of the day. The advance at one time was equal to one-half to 3 per cent., and in this improvement General blectric, Distribug and Carlle Feeling, American Sugar, Lake Shore, Northwestern, Western Union, Manhattan, Cotton Oil and Rock Lind was asset. American Sugar, Lake Shore, North-western, Western Union, Manhattan, Cotton Oil and Rock Island were most conspicuous; Union Pacific and Louis-ville and Nashville were notably weak. The former sold down from 19 to 18 on revival of the receivership story.

The Louisville and Nashville was sold for both local and foreign accounts. The shares at one time commanded a premium for use, but did not deter the sellers. The stock has been heavy ever since the directors denied to issue $70,000 new stock and refused to give any explanation for their action. The stock to-day fell from 49½ to 45½ and its business near the close led to relaxations in other parts of the list. Some of the active list closed receding 4 to 1 per cent. In the final transaction Louisville and Nashville rallied half to 46%. The market closed somewhat weaker in tone, but prices as a rule were anywhere from ½ to 1½ per cent higher than on Saturday, except for Cotton Oil preferred and Cordage comman, which shows gains of 2½@3 per cent. The total sales were 146,000 shares.
